

Mission of the France-Stanford Center

The France-Stanford Center for Interdisciplinary Studies, founded in partnership with the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs, bridges the disciplines of the Humanities, Social Sciences, Engineering, Business and Law, addressing issues of significance for France and the U.S. from a broad range of perspectives. It is part of Stanford Global Studies in the School of Humanities and Sciences.

2023–24 Academic Year

Roxane Debusson Fellowship

The Roxane Debusson Fellowship will provide funding to a Stanford graduate student to improve access and knowledge about the Roxane Debusson Collection on Paris History. Application deadline: March 1, 2024

Undergraduate Internship Program

The France-Stanford Center sponsors undergraduate internships with leading French-based institutions through the Global Studies Internship Program. Application deadline: February 5, 2024

Undergraduate Fellowship

The Undergraduate Fellowship program is intended to fund Stanford undergrads interested in undertaking research or pursuing an internship at a French institution. Application deadline: February 5, 2024

Student Prizes

The Josephine Baker Honors Thesis Prize, The Louise Bourgeois Essay Prize, and The James Baldwin Essay Prize are named for three people whose lives and careers spanned France and the United States, bringing French and American culture and society into dynamic conversation with one another. Application deadline: May 20, 2024

2024–25 Academic Year

Collaborative Projects

The center seeks to fund research projects across all disciplines. Priority will be given to projects with the potential to develop new collaborations involving junior researchers, and to those leading to collaborative work on interdisciplinary issues. Application deadline: March 1, 2024

Conferences/Workshops

Conferences or workshops, to be held at Stanford or at any French research institution, should address significant issues of common interest to scholars from France and Stanford. The topics proposed may be either historical or contemporary in their temporal focus and relevant to the two societies. Application deadline: March 1, 2024

Visiting Junior Scholar Fellowship

The Visiting Junior Scholar Fellowship is open to scholars who have completed a Ph.D. or equivalent (a degree requiring three or more years of graduate training) no more than seven years from the date of applying for the fellowship and who hold either a tenure-track/permanent position, a lecturer/researcher position or a postdoctoral position. These may be Stanford-based scholars interested in pursuing a research project at an educational or research institution in France or another francophone country or scholars based at an educational or research institution in France or another francophone country who are interested in pursuing a research project at Stanford. Application deadline: March 1, 2024

Visiting H&S Fellowship

The Visiting Fellowship in the Humanities and/or Social Sciences is open to scholars who have completed a Ph.D. or equivalent (a degree requiring three or more years of graduate training) no more than seven years from the date of applying for the fellowship and who hold either a tenure-track/permanent position, a lecturer/researcher position or a postdoctoral position. These may be Stanford-based scholars interested in pursuing a research project at an educational or research institution in France or another francophone country or scholars based at an educational or research institution in France or another francophone country who are interested in pursuing a research project at Stanford. Application deadline: March 1, 2024

Visiting Student Researcher Fellowship

The Visiting Student Researcher Fellowship is open to graduate students affiliated with an educational or research institution in France or another francophone country who are interested in pursuing a research project at Stanford, as well as Stanford students interested in pursuing a research project at an educational or research institution in France or another francophone country. Application deadline: March 1, 2024

For more information and to apply, please visit francestanford.stanford.edu.

Questions? Contact Isabelle Collignon, francestanford@stanford.edu.